

Jane L. Donoho

Residing in the burbs outside of Chicago, Jane has spent 15 years in key roles within large corporations such as Sears Technology Services, IBM, and AT&T as a Project Manager and Business Analyst. Upon leaving the big corporate environment in 2003 due to the economic downturn of many large corporations, it was at that time she decided to become self-employed.

Over the years Jane has had a few small businesses; j-Link Merchandise Group, a Sales and Marketing business specializing in the buying and selling of wholesale, surplus, and liquidated merchandise. Music 'n Me, a business for music education, and most recently JD Marketing, a small business solutions company. As an independent contractor/consultant I offer services in areas such as: Project Management, Account Management, Inbound Marketing, Market Research, Sales, Seminar/Event/Meeting planning, and others as requested.

Jane holds degrees in Education and Music Therapy, and certifications in Project Management and Human Resource and Volunteer Management.

In my free time she has volunteered with organizations such as Habitat for Humanity, Illinois Youth Golf Association, Local Teen Center, and the Illinois Food Pantry, and stays pretty active in local business and social groups, and tries to play as much golf as she can fit in.
